It seems that some writers think that being near a red star suppresses Superman's abilities, while others think that he just can't gain any power from an old, tired sun.

This video explores the true nature of Superman's solar power--how it defines his biology, his limits, and even his morality.

There are two main ingredients in Superman's home planet that are said to contribute to his powers on Earth. One is that Krypton itself is habitable (and potentially with heavier gravity), and in order for that ...

If you're a Superman fanatic, you would know that Superman's powers are affected by variable factors, and not just sunlight, as opposed to the general notion.

Superman has one of the largest array of powers of any DC superhero. While most fans know that Superman's powers come from the sun, that wasn't originally the case.

For most of his superhero career, Clark's powers have depended on what kind of solar radiation he's exposed to. Powerful yellow rays bring out his unique abilities, while weaker red ...

According to comic lore, the Krypton-born cape wearer gets his energy from the electromagnetic radiation contained in the light from our sun -- giving him various super powers here ...

Superman's homeworld of Krypton was located in a solar system with a red sun. Under a red sun, Kryptonians have no powers and their bodies are more or less like ordinary humans.

Superman has just discovered his most incredible power yet, but it's got a negative side that could result in the Man of Steel's death.

Superman only has solar power

So I know superman at one point was powered by electricity, but I believe that's retconned for Clark Kent and only available for Jon Kent. However, I've also seen Superman be powered by a magical solar ...
